

A Drastic Observation: Salvation:Ours to Keep or Lose

Observation on Salvation For years, for decades with unknown beginnings, the people claiming salvation have run into roadblocks that offer the challenge of uncertainty, starting with salvation itself. It would otherwise be justly assumed that one knows where they are going when they depart from this planet, if they are saved. Yet not all people have the audacity and humility to receive the guarantee. On the other hand, what if there is no guarantee? How responsible does an individual need to be in their development by the time their spirit and body separate? Observation on Endurance It is usually regarded as normal, the hardened atmosphere, inward and outward: disquieting of attacks, deception, and falsification of character. A seemingly endless missile parade one dodges might typically be viewed as mainstay for the elect, but how congenial are surrendered reactions to delve, during spiritually challenging times? What is stable composes countering behavior? Observation on Tongues The fastest growing faith globally will probably always be Christianity-believed or not, noted or not. The God of the Holy Bible never seems to be outdone. The largest and fastest growing expression of this faith is the God-traditional Pentecost experience, a baptism mandate set forth by King Yeshua just prior to His ascension. From oppositional standpoints, the most sought-after expression of this baptism tradition are the languages that it brings-sought after by a force our surrounding secular world increasingly hesitates to identify as even existing, but a force wholeheartedly bent at keeping a specific type of language (of all things!) from being utilized. Of what measure might its potential be? Of what stature its value?
